New York Institute of Photography Announces Holiday Gift Suggestions

Top 10 gift ideas sure to delight any avid photographer

New York, NY (December 2, 2009) – Now available from the photo experts at the New York Institute of Photography (www.nyi100years.com), America's oldest and largest photography school, are the top 10 holiday gift ideas perfect for the photographer on anyone's gift list.

“While there are lots of holiday gift guides available from retail stores and consumer magazines, these lists are often swayed by profit margins or advertising dollars. At NYIP, we're advertiser-free and wanted to take this opportunity to let consumers know what we think will make the best gifts this holiday season,” said Chuck DeLaney, Director of the New York Institute of Photography. “To create this list we talked to our staff of working photographers and came up with an unbiased and short list of great gift ideas. Our Holiday Gift Guide includes ideas for every type of photographer, and for most every budget.”

The top 10 gift ideas include: personalized U.S. postage stamps, a color calibration system for photographers that print their own digital pictures, photo books, customizable business cards, waterproof camera cases, a mini HD camcorder, a unique creative effects lens, a portable image storage solution for the photographer on the go, personalized mouse pad, and a very portable tripod. Holiday gift givers can find the complete list of innovative and exciting photography products along with links for more product information at: <http://www.nyip.com/studentcenter/giftguide09.html>.
